How to remove the front panel of a whirlpool duet dryer

Please see both sections on this page for Appliance Aid on these different styles of dryers. Inglis, Whirlpool and Kenmore style dryers - how to take apart: disconnect power first - Many dryers that I see have the two piece front, but some are the full front with no lower access panel on the bottom front (see paragraph below). The lower panel can be removed by using a straight screw driver to pry it off the upper clips, place screw driver in the middle top area (below the door opening) and "pop" it out towards you, sometimes you may have to do this at the side top corners of the lower panel as well. Once uncliped from the top clips, the panel will have to be lifted up off the lower clips towards you. Once the lower panel is off, you should be able to see 2 screws on the bottom corners of the door panel, loosen these 2 screws off a couple of turns but do not remove them. From here you can see the idler pulley, motor, belt break switch and part of the belt. To go further in the disassembly, lift the cover from the lint filter or if yours is the one with a filter. You will see 2 screws under the cover/filter, remove them. Now, you will need a putty knife or a thin shafted straight screw driver to remove the top panel. Push the putty knife or screw driver here to "pop" the front top clips. The top panel will hinge back towards the wall and can be left there. Just inside the top of the front panel, you will see 2 screws, remove them. You will see the wires for the door switch on the right side, remove the metal clips to allow a more loose wire harness, hold the drum up slightly in one hand and tilt the top of the screws that you loosened earlier and place it on the right side of the dryer cabinet. On the dryers with a full front, use the same directions but you can ignore the lower panel and the loosen the screws parts. The front will lift off of 2 clips about 6 inches from the bottom and again be placed on the right side of the cabinet. You should undo the belt from the idler pulley and motor pulley, now you are ready to remove the drum. Just grab hold of both ends and lift it out. This style of dryer also has a rear access panel, you can see the operating thermostats, heat element connections from this point. Replacing the motor repair aid. Full front Inglis, Whirlpool and Kenmore style dryers: disconnect power first - Once you have the top tilted up and inner front screws off, you pull the top of the front panel out towards you and lift the front panel off the clips that hold the bottom of the front is placed onto a clip on the front of the dryer cabinet, the front panel has a hole in it that will sit on a tab built into the front clip. You must pull up slightly to disengage it from the clip and push down slightly to reinstall the front onto the clip. Inglis, Whirlpool and Kenmore electric element changing procedures. An electric dryer that doesn't seem to be heating, or heating enough to dry, could require the replacement of the main control board. Sometimes diagnosing the problem is more difficult than fixing it. If this seems to be the problem, replacement on a Whirlpool duet electric dryer is not difficult. Unplug the drver from the wall. Remove the top panel by removing the screws in the back of the unit. Push the panel could have sharp edges. Remove the panel plate on the left side of the dryer as you face it by removing the screws and also remove the two pins, or zip ties, which help hold it in place. Then lift out the panel. Next, you'll want to start removing the electric connections - some pull straight off, others have clips that you'll need to push in to remove. Pliers will be needed to remove some of the terminals. Once all the wires are off, you can remove the control panel and bracket. Take off the panel from the bracket by removing the long screw. To install the new control board, first make sure you are placing it correctly and push the tabs in place. Then replace the long screw. If the screw doesn't match up, you'll know you have placed the new panel incorrectly and will need to turn it around. Then you'll reinstall the new control board and bracket. Carefully install the wiring, each to their correct location. They are keyed to go in one way to avoid errors, so don't try to force something into the wrong location. Once that is done you are ready to replace the panel, reinstalling each pin or zip tie by lining it up with the hole and inserting it in place. Replace the top panel. Plug in the dryer and run it for a test. Some appliance problems are not as big as they may seem, but for many of us, well, it is difficult to understand.
